

Roger Stewart

Captain Carl Christian Franz Radefeld and Second Lieutenant Ludwig Renner drew a series of 115 detailed miniature maps for the publisher Joseph Meyer, who produced several atlases. Unusually, these were issued in parts over a number of years. His 'handy-sized atlas', Meyer's pfennig-atlas, was issued from 1834-1841, with four maps in each part and the last of these included the title-page for the complete work. Most owners had them bound unfolded in oblong format.

The maps are about 145 x 90 mm. and all finely engraved on steel. Some are after Thomas Starling (see 1831a) but many others are after plates in another Meyer atlas. A surprisingly large number feature insets and some are variously dated 1834-1841, but most have outline hand-colour. They include twenty-four circular plans of European cities on twelve plates. Almost half are signed by the cartographer but only eighteen by the engraver, including two by Londoner Thomas Starling. Although it is an 'atlas of the entire earth', almost half of the maps relate to Germany/Austria.

M. Witkam has provided comprehensive information for collectors, including images, titles and cartographers'/engravers' signatures: Atlassen en kaarten verzamelen [Collecting atlases and maps]. This is available online at www.atlassen.info.
